

CINEMATIC THEATRE MASTERCLASS FOR TEACHERS

Markwell Presents in partnership with Drama Queensland are offering an exciting 3 day masterclass for teachers on Cinematic Theatre.

In this masterclass participants will explore the elements of Cinematic Theatre, engage in practical play-building and technical workshops focusing on:

- Cinematic theatre creative rationale and conventions
- Play-building in response to pretext
- Cinematic design - incorporating elements of projection
- Filming and post-production
- Integration of projection into performance
- Timing and sequencing DVD for performance
- Performance with Cinematic elements

Attendees will explore these concepts, whilst also working in small groups to create and produce a 5-10 min Cinematic Theatre Performance.

About Markwell Presents

Brad Jennings and Steven Maxwell met working together as secondary teachers where they started to produce original work. Their first theatre collaboration was in 2001 they produced Blow Out, written and directed by Jennings, stage managed by Maxwell at the Cow Shed, James Cook University.

Since founding Markwell Presents in 2002 they have written and then produced 9 new plays for young people featuring Cinematic Theatre: The integration of the excitement of live performance and the magic of the big screen. Markwell Presents have directed and produced 14 performance seasons of their own plays and have also worked with La Boite Theatre Co, Qld Theatre Co and Zen Zen Zo to design and integrate visual sequences for their main stage performances.

Brad and Steven coined the term Cinematic Theatre to describe the fusion of live performance and screen technology they wanted to create. The integrated use of projection during stage scenes and scene transitions allows the live action to become continuous, therefore creating a suspension of disbelief that engages the audience.

To teach our Cinematic Theatre style we have devised a comprehensive creative rationale so that educators and students can use the conventions and elements that we utilise. Markwell Presents provide positive learning experiences for secondary students in drama, and film studies. We offer an extensive range of support services for drama and media teachers including professional development workshops, artist in residence programs, in class workshops, books and DVDs.

Markwell Presents have delivered 60 Artist in Residence programs in schools and government arts projects, presented over 120 in class Workshops in schools and institutions, sold over 700 script texts to over 80 schools.
